GOLF COURSE WOULD BOOST LAKE REGION

Poor Season Indicates More Attractions Needed for Vacationists

MANY SUITABLE SITES

The Lake Region heaved a sigh of relief Monday night as the last of a record holiday crowd were on their way home.

The rush for the lakes started Friday night and continued until Sunday morning.

The resort keeps hung out their S. R. O. signs early Saturday and by evening there was not a room to be had at the lakes or in town. Many of the disappointed visitors were forced to camp on the grounds around the hotels.

The different amusement centers around the lakes were packed to overflow and really was a fitting climax to what has been generally conceded as a poor season around the lakes.

Many of the resort owners lay the cause of the poor season to the cool weather and others to the poor road conditions. The rush of visitors over the holidays and the extremely hot weather the past week proves without doubt that the cool summer has been the cause of the lack of vacationists to the lakes this summer.

Another point that probably should be brought out at this time is the lack of advertising indulged in by the hotel owners of this region. Their business must be advertised as consistently as any other line of business. Some of the proprietors seem perfectly satisfied with what they call their "steady patrons," but they must realize when people want a vacation they also want a change, and to expect their "steady patrons" to come up here year after year is inconsistent with a general idea of a vacation.

This is the time for the resort owners to prepare for their business for next year. Many suggestions are offered for drawing greater crowds to this section but none have been acted upon. Possibly the best suggestion advanced is a community golf course, one that can be taken advantage of by all.

With the completion of the cement road through from Chicago next year this part of the country should be recognized as an ideal place for vacationists. We have a beautiful set of lakes with an ever steady flow of water from the Fox river flowing through them, and as pretty a country as one could wish, easily accessible to Chicago and the North Shore. An ideal place for a business man to bring his family to for the summer and spend his week-ends here or drive back and forth over the road.

But what has this business man to look forward to, possibly fishing and swimming. Why not go a little further and give him golf and a club house. Golf is a game that has attracted the young as well as the old and there is not a more healthful and attractive sport.

How much better it would be to have this class of golf-loving business men here with their families as all summer vacationists than to have the crowd that has been coming here of late for Saturday night bent on raising as much ruction as they can and in the whole a detriment to the welfare of this section, rather than a benefit.

They are of no benefit to the hotel and amusement proprietors of this country. They are a big source of danger to any highway and nothing but troublemakers at the amusement places and hotels.

Last Saturday night's crowd evidently was the limit to the patience of the quiet and peaceful-loving people who come here for clean amusement and rest, and the continuance of catering to this class of trade will eventually ruin this section of the lake region as it has appeared to at the southern end of the chain.

Now is the time for the hotel people to get together for their protection. They must make plans to stamp out this rowdy, moonshine-drinking parties that have been making this section a tool to their half-crazed

Robert E. Treiger of Norwood Park visited with relatives and friends at Antioch and vicinity the forepart of the week.

BRISTOL LADS HURT IN AUTO MISHAP

Paul and Emmerson Wiedman of Bristol were seriously injured last Saturday night while riding with two boys who had taken a car from Padock's Lake without the consent of the owner.

Paul and Emmerson were walking along the road when they met the boys with the stolen car and accepted an invitation to take a ride. The car was started and driven at a high rate of speed along the Geneva road and the two Wiedman boys became much alarmed and started to jump out when the car ran into a culvert and turned turtle, resulting in the injury to the two Wiedman boys. Paul was removed to the Kenosha hospital suffering a broken leg and possible fracture of the skull. Emerson escaped with minor cuts and bruises. The two boys who took the car escaped serious injury. The car was completely wrecked.

STILL WORKING FOR CEMENT ROAD THIS FALL

Barrington citizens who have been trying to determine the reason for the delay in the construction of the cement road between this village and Dundee road at the viaduct, were informed a member of the county highway department, who was in Springfield last week, that this road was never removed from the cement priority list. They have been told that cement is not obtainable for the building of this road at the present time.

While they are still endeavoring to persuade authorities to hasten the building of this road, the prospect that this construction will be commenced this fall is not bright, they say.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS AT THE ANTIOCH POSTOFFICE

There are unclaimed letters at the local postoffice for: Miss Dorothy Brennan, Floyd Burch, Budman, A. E. Christensen, Miss Hermine Drew, Miss Hattie Duleck, W. MANY PHONE CALLS AT LOCAL EXCHANGE

The local telephone exchange has been kept exceedingly busy the past month. A total of 6500 toll calls passed through the Antioch exchange, while on August 18th a total of 1800 calls of various descriptions were made.

Now is the time for the hotel people to get together for their protection. They must make plans to stamp out this rowdy, moonshine-drinking parties that have been making this section a tool to their half-crazed

Antioch Loses Close Game to Fansteels

With the Fansteels "loaded" with the best ball players from four teams on the Lake Shore and an umpire that was inclined in their favor Antioch was defeated at the fair Monday by a score of 4-2.

Antioch went to the fair with their usual line-up with the exception of "Ollie" Olsen, who is not a stranger to the local fans, it being the intention of the manager to use Ollie on the firing line, but Bob Wilton loomed up to good in the warm-up that he was started and pitched one of the finest games of his career. At no time was Bob in trouble, and with a little more even breaks of the game and better judgment on the part of the umpire might have let Fansteel down with a defeat.

Winters did the firing for the Fansteels and every man on the Antioch team hit him hard but were unable to get the breaks. He allowed seven hits, while Wilton was hit safely 8 times, walked one and struck out eight.

Although Antioch was defeated, great credit is due them for their gameness in tackling this team, greatly strengthened for this particular game with some of the best players in the county.

The Antioch Athletic Association has closed its season but the team, anxious to take advantage of the fine baseball weather and the sport, will continue to play games during September. Next Sunday they will play Libertyville on the home grounds and the game will start at 2:15. Admission will be 35c and 20c. The lineup:

LAKE COUNTY COWS ATTRACT ATTENTION

Lake County Holstein breeders are attracting wide attention by reason of the many fine pure bred herds owned and because its breeders have more cows at the Dixon, Ill., yearly testing plant than any other county in Illinois. Nineteen cows are now on yearly test and some fine records are being made.

At the fair this week, secretary of the Sheboygan County Holstein association will be present on Thursday and Friday at the Holstein tent to talk to prospective purchasers of pure bred females. Sheboygan county has many notable herds and stands close to the top in numbers of herds for a single county.

Frank T. Fowler of Lake Villa bought all his foundation herd in Sheboygan county and says:

"I have looked in several states for my start and I liked the Holsteins I saw there better than in any other section. The breeders are a fine, square lot of men and deserving of confidence. I am glad they recognize Lake county. Mr. Wehrwein, who is coming, knows the herds and he will be glad to talk to all who are interested."

GOOD CHANCE TO FIX SIDE STREETS

There has been considerable talk among property owners around town of taking advantage of the leisure time of Mr. Rutledge's crew to make improvements on some of the other street in town.

The subject has been discussed by the board of local improvements but due to lack of funds they have had to drop the matter.

It would seem to be a good point if the property owners on the various street could get together and get some figures on different improvements that could be made and stop the constant drain on their pocket books every year for oil and other means of keeping the streets up.

There are several means in which the streets could be put into such shape as to hold up two to five years at a small figure. Any property owner of a street desiring to look into this proposition can get figures from the foreman of the Rutledge Company.

The News will be glad to hear of any attempt on the part of any property owners to put through an improvement.

H. A. RADTKE RETIRES FROM ACTIVE BUSINESS

H. A. Radtke, who has operated a local barber shop for some 25 years, has turned his business over to his two sons, Harry and Morris Radtke. Both the sons are experienced barbers, Morris having worked in Waukegan for the past few years, while Harry has been at his father's shop. Mr. Radtke, after having been at the barber trade for 32 years, has no plans for the future, but will take an extended vacation before entering a new field of business.

EX-VILLAGE MARSHAL HELD FOR DEATH THREAT

Guy Morrell, who resigned recently as village marshal of Fox Lake, was arrested Sunday on a charge of drawing a revolver and threatening to kill A. H. Myers, village clerk. He was placed under a $1,000 peace bond for six months by Justice H. C. Coulson at Waukegan and his case set for hearing Sept. 12.

Worthy of the Pen of James Fenimore Cooper

Erskine Dale—Pioneer

By JOHN FOX, JR.

Distinctly a Cooper character is this highly interesting frontiersman-trapper-hunter-guide, soldier—in whose veins flowed the undiluted blood of Virginia's proudest, but whose boyhood had been spent entirely among the Indians.

Erskine Dale spoke a little French, less English, but was fluent in the Shawnee dialect when fate called him back to the home of his ancestors. We witness a surprising unfoldment of the character and ability that had been submerged by his savage training. He speedily became more than a match for the gallants of the time—Colonial days—in every sort of contest, even to the winning of hearts.

It is a stirring tale of romance and adventure in pioneer times, especially commended by its fine patriotism.

Smashes Car Into Barricade—Steal Parts

Shortly after midnight on Sunday a Ford touring car raced north on Main street at full speed with the tire off one of the rear wheels. When the machine reached the J. Van Patten farm the rim of the wheel broke and the car continued at full speed, riding on the ends of the spokes until it smashed into the barricade which closes the road at the south end of town, where it was stopped. The barricade, which consists of one-inch planks nailed onto large fence posts, was smashed from its foundation.

After the occupants of the car saw it was impossible to go over the new concrete road under construction, they took all removable parts of value off the machine and abandoned it. The car was a Ford touring car bearing an Illinois license No. 574-349, and on the radiator was a Chicago vehicle plate, No. 55929. The tools and parts of the machine that were of little value were strewn over the inside of the car. A strong odor of booze was in evidence and a newly made bullet hole was in the center of the back of the body of the car.

The Antioch Sales and Service Station took the car in charge after an all day stay at the south limits. The car was reported stolen in Chicago and the owner has called for it.

GUN CLUB ORDERED OFF HANSMAN LAND

The Fort Dearborn Gun Club, which has been operated at Grass Lake by Ernest Melchoir, was ordered to vacate from the property owned by Harry Hansman.

The property in question is what is known as lot 9 and was formerly owned by Lee Middendorf and leased to Melchoir in 1916 for five years. The lease expired in 1921 and Middendorf sold the property to Harry Hansman. On the property is a shack which is owned by the gun club and which Melchoir values at $125. Hansman claims the shack is a detriment to his land and wants it and the gun club removed from his property.

The climax came Tuesday morning when Justice James ordered the gun club to trespass on Hansman's property. The case will probably be appealed to the circuit court.

55 HEAD OF LIVE STOCK AT AUCTION

H. A. Tillotson is offering 55 head of livestock at an auction sale to be held on Tuesday, Sept. 12 at his farm at Pikeville Corners, on State Line, 4 1/2 miles east of Antioch and 4 1/2 miles south of Bristol. The stock consists of 25 head of high-grade Holstein cows and 30 hogs. At this sale will be sold Lucile Homestead Boy, 2-year-old bull, No. 318110, H. F. B., sire of Mechthilde Maplecrest Lad and dam of Lady Lucile 4th. The sale starts at 1 o'clock. L. J. Slocum will be the auctioneer.

Set Out a New Strawberry Patch This Fall

The fall of the year is an extremely good time in which to start that new berry patch, we have been planning, not only because there is more leisure then to devote to this work, but also because the berries will be just that much more advanced in their growth by next spring and summer.

By purchasing strawberry plants and setting them out this fall, instead of waiting to set them in the spring, you will decidedly improve your crop of berries. By setting out the Ever-bearing types, which will give you berries up to frost next year, you will procure a good, full crop of berries by next summer.

Or by purchasing the "pot grown" berry plants, and putting them in your garden now, you will actually pick your first crop of strawberries from these plants next spring.

No home garden should be without at least a small bed of strawberries. Quite a small patch of ground will be sufficient on which to start a good bed of berries which will produce first quality fruit for the home table, and some to make into jam or to can for the winter supply.

How foolish it is for people with sunny exposures going to waste to pay each summer twenty-five cents a quart for inferior strawberries, when for that same price they could purchase a dozen or two plants which would yield the best quality berries.

In choosing the location for your berry patch, do not select too sheltered a spot where the plants will come up too early in the spring and run the risk of being hit by the frost, but try to get an airy, sunny spot on a southern slope.

Strawberries thrive very well on an acid soil, so it is not necessary to plant them on ground that has been recently limed.

In preparing your strawberry bed in the fall, it is necessary to prepare the ground for it with extra care. Cultivate the ground much more thoroughly than you would in the springtime, planting the berries if possible, after a good soaking rain in order to make up for the moisture that is in the ground naturally at the spring planting time.

It is the best to use a horse and harrow in preparing your bed, but, if these are not available, use the hand plow attachment to the wheel hoe, or fork the ground up all over most thoroughly, as simply digging out holes in sunbaked soil will not be sufficient preparation.

Apply old well rotted manure to the soil, or a good "complete" fertilizer,

SOMETHING ABOUT "THE CONQUERING POWER"

The Grandet brothers have amassed fortunes—one by showy speculation in Paris, the other by keen miserliness in the provincial town of Noyant. The Parisian's wealth is swept away in a market gamble and he kills himself, leaving his son, Charles, a spoiled dandy of the boulevards, to the charity of his miserly brother. Charles travels to Noyant, where he meets his charming cousin, Eugenie. A simple, unworldly girl, she is fascinated by his metropolitan finesse. But her father, lustful for gold, packs the impoverished young man off to Martinique. Charles carries with him Eugenie's love—and some thousands of francs that the girl had secretly given him. When the secret of the gift is learned, old Grandet, in a frenzy of rage, locks the girl in her room, and writes to Charles, who is struggling to make his fortune in the tropic island, that Eugenie is engaged to be married. So begins the tremendous drama of love and greed, founded upon "Eugenie Grandet," one of the greatest stories of the supreme novelist, Balzac, and translated to the screen for Metro in a production by Rex Ingram. The production that has been acclaimed in New York as rivaling the Ingram presentation of Ibanez' "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and the two principals of "The Four Horsemen," Alice Terry and Rudolph Valentino have scored the greatest triumph of their careers as Eugenie and Charles.

Before setting the strawberry plants, the roots should be trimmed back about a half, and all dead broken and large leaves removed, in order to make the plant as stocky and sturdy as possible. Sometimes this is done in the nursery before they are sent out.

It is always better to plant the strawberries on a cloudy day, or late in the afternoon, and after they are planted keep them well watered and shaded if possible until they root and get a good start.

Firming the soil thoroughly with the balls of the feet about each plant as it is set is one of the most important parts in strawberry planting, and will go far towards securing success.

Before severe frosts sets in, carefully mulch the strawberry patch with salt or meadow hay if they can be procured but if this is not possible, any straw, hay or old leaves will do for this purpose. Cover with this mulch to depth of 2 or 3 in., holding it in place if necessary with boards. Leave this mulch on the bed until growth begins in the springtime.

Among the most satisfactory and hardiest varieties for home use are, Early Jersey Giant and Premier, for early; Edmond Wilson and Marshall, for midseason; and Chesapeake and Stevens Late Champion for late.

By all means, a few of the ever-bearing type should be included. One of the best if these is "Progressive", which will yield good sized berries up until hard frost.

Free Public Schools in Old Rome.
By the Fourth century in the Roman empire there was a system of free elementary schools for the children of all workers; a system of free secondary schools for the better pupils, and a number of special schools (like universities) which also could be reached without payment by the poor. The municipalities everywhere were compelled to maintain these.—J. McCabe in "The Evolution of Civilization."

Two Things Life Taught Him.
The longer I live the more I am satisfied of two things: First, that the truest lives are those that are cut rose-diamond fashion, with many facets answering to the many-planned aspects of the world about them; secondly, that society is always trying in some way or other to grind us down to a single facet.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Nerves Beginning Early.
Mary's little brother had broken her doll's house and done other annoying things, until at last she gave way to her exasperation and slapped him. Asked to explain her conduct, Mary said, "Well, he's been getting on my temper all day till my nerves just flew at him."—Boston Transcript.

Annie Laurie.
This famous song was written by Annie Laurie's lover, William Douglass of Flindin, Scotland, about the year 1705. She was the daughter of Sir Robert Laurie of Maxwelton, Dumfriesshire, first baronet of Maxwelton. Douglass' courtship was unsuccessful; for in the year 1709 Annie Laurie married a Mr. Fergusson of Crugdarroch. The tune of the song was composed by Lady John Scott.

Doesn't Believe in Asoka.
Lately there is talk of an ancient ruler who was an honest man, and just with his subjects. He is called Asoka. I am of the opinion that this man was invented by a clever literary specialist, that he might have something new to write about. I do not believe, in short, that there ever was such a ruler.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

PROVE EVIL OF MALNUTRITION

Case of Italian Laborers One of Many Which Might Be Cited as Evidence.

As a result of undernutrition, says Dr. Graham Luck, in an elaborate study of the subject, there is a decrease in the muscular efficiency not only of paid laborers but also of persons living sedentary lives, according to the New York World. The muscular activities which are concerned with the normal preservation of health become restricted. The love of roaming and of sport is lost, children cease to play and a person avoids as far as possible all bodily exertion. The mood of the individual affects the result. Thus, by special effort, one may overcome the sensation of fatigue for a certain number of days in order to accomplish a definite result, as does the soldier who advances by magnificent forced marches in anticipation of victory. But this is a very different matter of comparison with the accomplishment of work in the dull, monotonous daily grind of civilian life.

During the World war certain Italian farm laborers, receiving 450 gm. of flour daily, accomplished their work. When this ration was cut to 250 gm. they refused to work. The same apathy is true as regards mental work. The love of accomplishment, the power of performance and the note of personal initiative, which under ordinary conditions increase the assimilation of food and favor muscular energy, are absent.

PLANTS THAT KILL ANIMALS

Vulture Lily of Borneo and Venezuelan Death Orchid Are Shunned by All Living Creatures.

At least two plants are known which, like the fabled upas tree, have the power of killing large animals. One is the so-called vulture lily of Borneo and Sumatra, which stands six feet high and grows in patches, each covering a space the size of a large room. The leaves are enormous, being ten to twelve feet long.

The other, and even more terrible plant, is the death orchid, which grows in Venezuela, beyond the headwaters of the great Orinoco river. This was discovered by an orchid hunter, who was directed by Indians to the lonely spot where this amazing plant grew. He says the odor was so strong that he first perceived it miles from the place where he eventually found the plant. The Indians refused to accompany him farther, saying that to do so was to court certain death.

At last he reached a point from which he became aware of flowers of great size and gorgeous coloring, glowing through the tree trunks ahead. He was just able to crawl away, and the next thing he knew was being carried in a litter by his men. For weeks afterward he was seriously ill, and nearly died from the effects of the terrible fumes.

A FULL HOUSE

The child of eight was making a great fuss over the basket of young puppies which the man on the corner of the suburban town was offering for sale.

"Maybe your mother might buy you one, eh?" the woman heard him suggest to the child. "If I was to go by your house now . . . ?"

The child looked up at him ecstatically, but after an instant's reflection her face fell.

"I don't believe she will," she replied, disconsolately, as she gazed down at the puppies. "You see, she's got four children already!"

NEW BOOZE RECORD

The record of Kentucky's famous squirrel whisky has been surpassed. Joseph Maltz, a baker, after drinking a half pint of the stuff now generally sold in New York, instead of climbing a tree, kissed three sixty-year-old women whom he had never seen before and jumped off a Williamsburg pier, though he couldn't swim. He was rescued and arrested.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

FEDERAL AID ROADS INCREASED 600 MILES

Nearly 600 miles nearer the goal of a completed system of highways for the United States is the report of the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture for the month of July. The final goal, the construction of a system of approximately 180,000 miles of Federal-aid highway consisting of a network of trunk line and secondary roads reaching into practically every county is still a long way off but we are 5,392 miles nearer than at the beginning of the year according to the bureau.

Completed Federal aid roads now total 18,299 miles with 14,912 miles under construction and approximately 60 per cent complete. Including projects not yet under construction Federal-aid roads in all stages now total 40,338 miles.

There is no indication of any slackening of the greatly increased rate of progress which began with the season of 1921 as the States continue to pour in plans for new projects and place them under construction as rapidly as possible.

At the present time the force of the bureau is taxed to the limit with the examination of new plans and projects, inspection of roads under construction and the planning of the Federal-aid highway system which is being gotten into final shape.

GIVE THEM A CHANCE

Do we all patronize home industry as we should? You don't expect grass without water; then you can't expect local stores to enlarge their stock to suit your needs if you don't buy from them. We should have more co-operation between our merchants and their customers. Demand sooner or later creates a supply. If you want something you can't get in your town stores, tell your dealers, traders or merchants, let them get it for you. Give them the chance at least to fill the bill. With a little co-operation we will have everybody trading at home and the old town will grow and everyone will prosper.

MOVING PICTURES TO SHOW VARIOUS TYPES OF HIGHWAYS

A series of one-reel motion picture films illustrating modern practice in the construction of the various types of highways has been prepared under the direction of the Bureau of Public Roads and are now available for free distribution by the motion-picture section of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The films, consisting of one reel each, are as follows: "Modern Concrete Road Construction"; "Building Bituminous Roads"; "Mixed Asphalt Pavements"; "Brick from Clay to Pavement"; "Granite Block Paving"; "High Roads and Sky Roads."

In addition there will be completed in a short time "Building Forest Roads." A film on gravel-roads construction is in course of preparation.

These films are intended for use in engineering colleges, road meetings, and other public gatherings. They may be obtained upon application to the department for use on specific dates without cost other than that of paying for transportation both ways. On account of the limited number of copies of each film it is best to make reservations some time in advance.

STYLES ASSURED AND LOVELY FOR WEAR IN THE AFTERNOON

A FROCK of canton crepe and one of crepe-satin, among the first contributions to the autumn modes for the afternoon, find themselves now representing styles that are assured. They could hardly help making a success, having done so well with the new points in the mode which they chose to include in their makeup.

The dress at the left takes advantage of the fine draping qualities of canton crepe, and uses it in black, combined with crepe de chine in a light color, to form the lower part of the flaring sleeves. The skirt slopes to points at the left side and is slashed there. Having bestowed this darling and telling touch to it, the designer centered his thoughts on the girdle and bodice and accomplished something new in each of them. Three strands of silk cord form a belt across the sides and back and fall in long ends at the front, finished with slender silk tassels. The bodice blouses over the girdle at a low waist line. An applique of black silk braid over the lower part of the sleeves is immensely effective. The round neck with a little "V" shaped slash at the front is faced back with crepe de chine, which forms a piping for it, and the two silk buttons and loops finish it perfectly.

START IMPROVEMENT ON WAUCONDA ROAD
Work was started last week improving the Barrington-Wauconda road by grading and scarifying. Only a little work was done between Manson's corner and Major Lytle's farm when the machinery was removed to repair a road north of Volo. As soon as the work near Volo has been completed the work on the Wauconda road will be again taken up and this road will be thoroughly scarified, scraped and graded.

BRINGS DEATH BY PARALYSIS
Curare, Used by South American Indians to Poison Arrows, Inert When Taken Into Stomach.

Practically all Central and South American Indians (such as use poisoned arrows at all) use the same poison—the dried juice of a species of strichnos. Its physiological action is to paralyze the end-plates of motor nerves. Thus, without affecting the central nervous system at all, it causes complete paralysis of all the muscles. Death is due to paralysis of the heart and respiratory muscles. Curare, as it is called, has no other action; it does not affect consciousness nor is it anesthetic. The important and interesting thing about curare is that it is inert unless introduced directly into the body-fluids. It can be swallowed even in large quantities without ill effects, because it is broken up in the stomach by the digestive process. Introduced into the blood stream, however, by hypodermic injection, or by a dart, knife or arrow impregnated with it, curare is highly poisonous. It acts almost instantly, paralyzing all muscles, so that its victim drops at once, inert. And that victim may be eaten with impunity, because curare is broken up during digestion.—Adventure Magazine.

Musical Taste.
A walking tourist espied an old sedan in the doorway of a cottage, fiddling utterly regardless of time and tune. Stopping for a while to listen in amusement, the tourist at last asked: "When do you tune your violin?" "I don't," was the reply. "It don't sound right if I tune it."

The ships employed in carrying ice from Norway to England are fast wooden boats, for a cargo of ice would not survive the voyage in an iron vessel, owing to the ease with which metal conducts heat.

REGULAR SERVICES

Holy Communion.	8:00 a.m.
(Except 3d Sunday)
Church School	9:45 a.m.
Morning Prayer	11:00 a.m.
Holy Eucharist	11:00 a.m.
(Third Sunday)

Last Sunday Father Batty was able to be present at the early service, as his machine is now in running order again. The early Eucharist was well attended, but the later service not so well attended because of the holidays.

Next Sunday is the Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity, and on that Sunday this mission will be visited by the Rev. Edward S. White, now Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, St. Louis, Mo., and founder of the mission. It is almost seven years ago that this mission was founded by him. It is therefore a very great pleasure for us to have him here for this Sunday. He will celebrate the Holy Communion at 8:00, at 9:45 he will administer the Sacrament of Holy Baptism during the Church School session, and at 11:00 he will celebrate the Eucharist and preach. At that time the Eucharist will be sung to the setting of "The Holy Eucharist with hymns" that has been used before in this mission. All the communicants of the parish are especially urged to be present and to welcome home Father White, whose untiring efforts founded this mission, and started the work which has become so effective.

Please notice also that next Sunday we go back to the original time system, so that the services are at 8:00, 9:45 and 11:00. It is hard to find a time that is convenient to all persons, but during the summer the services have been early, and it seems only right that they should be later during the winter.

As this is the beginning of the fall term in the public schools the parents, teachers, and scholars of the Church School are especially urged to increase the attendance of the school. We hope that the warm weather will soon be over, and the cool days will mean much to increasing our enthusiasm and spirit.

During this week and probably for the next three weeks, the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in the United States of America is meeting in the city of Portland, Oregon. This is a momentous meeting and much of importance is being considered at this time. It deserves the prayers of all the faithful in the church, and we should ask the guidance of the Holy Spirit, as He has promised to be with us to guide us into all truth. He has also promised that the gates of hell shall not prevail against His Church. The Church gives us the following prayer for the occasion:

"Almighty and everlasting God, who by thy Holy Spirit didst preside in the Council of the blessed Apostles, and hast promised, through thy Son Jesus Christ, to be with thy Church to the end of the world; We beseech thee, so to direct, sanctify, and govern them in their work, by the mighty power of the Holy Ghost, that the comfortable Gospel of Christ may be truly preached, truly received, and truly followed, in all places, to the breaking down of the kingdom of sin, Satan, and death; till at length the whole of thy dispersed sheep, being gathered into one fold, shall become partakers of everlasting life; through the merits and death of Jesus Christ our Saviour. Amen."

Special attention is called to the news article on the front page of this issue of The News on the movement for week-day religious education. Everybody should read it carefully.

It should be kept in mind that the movement for more religious training for the children and youth of the community is not for the sake of advantage to any one church over any other, but that the effort is solely to give to the children and youth the religious training they need to be saved from wrong and evil thinking and feeling and conduct and to enable and enrich and beautify their lives.

It is expected that the movement for this type of religious training will have, from the start, the most earnest and hearty cooperation of all earnest-minded people, entirely regardless of their church affiliations, or whether they are affiliated with any church.

The conference year is very near to its close and all matters should be brought to completion by the fifteenth of the month, so that the work of closing up this year shall not be hanging in the way to block the plans for the next year.

The official board is very anxious that all financial obligations shall be met by Sept. 15, for the further reason that it is extremely difficult to get the books all footed up and all the many reports made out before conference time if the finances are not all in hand about the middle of September.

If we all realized just how much unnecessary hard work is caused to the officials (who do the work without financial compensation) by delays in getting into their hands the moneys they must have, we would all be very careful not to neglect or delay getting our part of the funds into their hands in good time.

The Butt of the Jokers

By ANNE WHITFIELD

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

Harold Straker seemed naturally cut out for a butt from his earliest days. Boys in the village school found that he could be sent for a pint of pigeon's milk or given impossible errands on April Fool's day. He rang up "Mr. Fish" at the state hatcheries, and got New York on long distance for "Mr. Lyons," to find it was the zoo.

Only one person seemed to have faith in him. That was Zoe Graves. "Harold, I do wish you didn't bite so often," she said when they were about fourteen. "You're such a nice boy, Harold, and it's just a shame, the way you trust everybody."

But Harold went on biting, even after he had entered the local office of the National Oil company, which meant, in a way, an assured future, even though he was only getting twenty dollars a week.

Some of the boys were jealous of Harold—notably Percy Spender, who was a rival for Zoe. And there were times when Zoe lost patience with Harold.

"Harold, can't you see that they're tormenting you?" she asked earnestly. "You believe everything—everything!"

"But when they said Jim Barton's child was dying, some one had to ride for the doctor," pleaded Harold.

"And how about Miss Foraker?" demanded Zoe. "Why did you go to the drug store on that impossible errand?"

"But Percy said she must have that salve immediately, Zoe."

"Yes, but what salve? Tulp salve. Two-lip salve, for an old maid! Oh, Harold, you're hopeless, I'm afraid!" said Zoe mournfully.

After that Harold knew that she saw more of Percy than she had done before. Even a devoted girl gets annoyed at a butt sometimes.

Harold was planning a visit to New York—his first—for which he had saved up fifty dollars. It was his week's holiday. The day before he left Spender came to him.

"Of course you intend to pay your respects to Mr. Cottoner," he said.

"Mr. Cottoner?" gasped Harold.

"Why, he wouldn't see me!"

"He'll be extremely angry if he learns you've been in New York without seeing him," said Percy. "Don't you see, Harold, what a chance it is to get him to make Spoonerville the northern state center for oil distribution? He expects the local men to come and talk things over with him. Why, I've drafted a letter for you to announce your visit!"

Harold read the typescript. It was a blatant announcement to Mr. Cottoner, the octogenarian head of the company, that he, Harold Straker, intended to pay a visit to New York for the purpose of discussing local affairs, and would call on him at his country home at Millwell Hills at a certain hour on the following Tuesday morning."

"Are you sure he'll want to see me?" gasped Harold.

"Your job won't be worth a week's purchase if you don't see him," answered Percy.

Harold departed, having sent off the letter. Percy and the boys in the office saw him off at the station, and went back, chattering. Harold registered at a small hotel to which he had been recommended, and went out to Mr. Cottoner's country home the following day.

He was so dazed that he hardly knew what happened until he found himself confronting the aged financier, who was sitting in a pillow chair in his living-room.

The old man scrutinized him. "Sit down! Sit down!" he said testily. "Now what's this mad scheme of yours for making Spoonerville the northern distribution center?"

Harold was aroused. It had been his own pet scheme, and the subject of ridicule in the office. Now he had his chance at last. Forgetting his fears, he poured forth his views: how Spoonerville was linked up with so many neighboring cities by trolley and railroad; but a short pipe line branch—he drew a diagram on Cottoner's immaculate blotting pad—would connect up with the southern reservoir. All the while Cottoner watched his face with growing interest. When Harold had ended he burst out:

"You're the right sort! I like your nerve! I wish all my men were like you! It's my own plan, and you've said it word for word! I was looking for a man. You're appointed head of the district at a hundred a week. That's enough! I know a good man when I see him! You'll get your letter of appointment tomorrow!"

Harold went home dazed. He went straight to Zoe's house. Percy was there, sitting on the sofa beside her.

"Why, here's Harold!" he exclaimed. "Well, well, and how did Cottoner receive you, Harold?"

Harold saw the blush of indignation on Zoe's face.

"Fine, Percy," he answered enthusiastically. "The scheme's gone through, and I'm to be manager at a hundred per. I'm so grateful to you fellows."

"Stop!" Zoe was on her feet. "Is that true, Harold? Do you mean that you saw Mr. Cottoner, and—"

"Sure it's true," answered Harold. And, with success, the bigger, submerged part of him came to the surface. "As true as that we're engaged. Haven't you told Percy?"

"N-no, not yet," faltered Zoe, blushing still deeper. "I was waiting for you to, Harold, dearest."

A FRENCH DRESS-UP FROCK FOR THE SMALL GIRL

THE photographer did not take this little French girl unawares when he made her picture. It is evident that she is proudly conscious of her "dress-up" frock and entirely satisfied with it, and with the idea of having her portrait made for the benefit of little girls who have not the privilege of being French.

We concede that her pretty dress is all right and well worth copying. It is very simple and looks as if it were made of velvet bound with satin, in a contrasting color. The blinding, at the neck and side openings, on the pockets and sleeves, are supplemented by flat, covered buttons which, with silk floss cross-stitching, make up the decoration. Many party frocks for younger girls are made with short sleeves and among them those of printed wash silk are charming. The long-waisted, one-piece models, with fullness drawn up over the hips, are delightfully simple and pretty. Plain grounds in white or light colors, covered with bright flowers, need almo

no trimming. Frills of net or narrow lace at the neck and sleeves, and narrow ribbon girdles, finish them delightfully.

Crepe de chine is probably more popular for party frocks than any other fabric. There are many ways of trimming it. Round necks and short sleeves are prettily finished with crepe-covered cord, put on in rings, set side by side, or interlacing. Narrow ribbons can be run through the rings and this is a fine arrangement for the girdle at the waist. The ribbon is tied in a rosette bow at the side. For very small girls, straight dresses of crepe de chine are finished with wide hem-stitched hem. Cross-stitch embroidery in bright colors is effective on white or light-colored frocks.

CHAPTER XVI.

That thunder in the soil, at first too deep within it to be audible, had come to the surface now and gradually became heard as the thunder of a million feet upon the training grounds. The bugles rang sharper; the drums and fifes of town and village and countryside were the drums and fifes of a war that came closer and closer to every heart between the two oceans.

All the old symbols became symbols bright and new, as if no one had ever seen them before. "American" was like a new word, and the song "America" was like a new song. All the dusty blinshances of orating candidates, seeking to rouse bored auditors with "the old flag"; all the mechanical patrotics of school and church and club; all these time-worn, faceted things leaped suddenly into living color. The flag became brilliant and strange to see—strange with a meaning that seemed new, a meaning long known, yet never known till now.

And so hearts that thought they knew themselves came upon ambushes of emotion and hidden indwelling of spirit not guessed before. Dora Yocom, listening to the "Star-Spangled Banner," sung by children of immigrants to an out-of-tune old piano in a mission clubroom, in Chicago, found herself crying with a soul-shaking heartiness in a way different from other ways that she had cried. Among the many things she thought of then was this: That the banner the children were singing about was in danger. The great country, almost a continent, had always seemed so untouched, so safe and sure; she had never been able to conceive of a hostile power mighty enough to shake or even jar it. And since so great and fundamental a thing could not be injured, a war for its defense had appeared to be, in her eyes, not only wicked but ridiculous. At last, less and less vaguely, she had come to comprehend something of the colossal German threat, and the shadow that touched this bright banner of which the immigrants' children piped so briskly in the mission clubroom.

She began to understand, though she could not have told just why, or how, or at what moment understanding reached her. She began to understand that her country, threatened to the life, had flung its line those thousands of miles across the sea to stand and hold Hindenburg and Ludendorff and all their kaisers, kings, dukes and crown princes, their Krupp and Skoda monstrous engines, and their monstrous other engines of men made into armaments. Through the long haze of misted sea-miles and the smoke of land-miles she perceived that brown line of ours, and knew it stood there that Freedom, and the Nation itself, might not perish from the earth.

And so, a week later, she went home and came nervously to Ramsey's mother and found how to direct the letter she wanted to write. He was in France.

As the old phrase went, she poured out her heart. It seems to apply to her letter.

She wrote:

"Don't misunderstand me. I felt that my bitter speech to you had driven you to take the step you did. I felt that I had sent you to be killed, and that I ought to be killed for doing it, but I knew, that you had other motives, too. I knew, of course, that you thought of the country more than you did of me, or of any mad thing I could say—but I thought that what I said might have been the prompting thing, the word that threw you into it so hastily and before you were ready, perhaps. I dreaded to bear that terrible responsibility. I hope you understand."

"My great mistake has been—I thought I was so logical!—it's been in my starting everything with a thought I'd never proven: that war is the worst thing and all other evils were lesser. I was wrong. I was wrong, because war isn't the worst evil. Slavery is a worse evil, and now I want to tell you I have come to see that you are making war on those that make slavery. Yes, you are fighting those that make both war and slavery, and you are right, and I humbly reverence and honor all of you who are in this right war. I have come home to work in the Red Cross here; I work there all day, and all day I keep saying to myself—but I really mean to you—it's what I pray, and oh, how I pray it: 'God be with you and grant you the victory!' For you must win and you will win."

"Forgive me, oh, please—and if you will, could you write to me? I know you have things to do more important than 'girls'—but oh, couldn't you, please?"

This letter, which she had taken care not to dampen, as she wrote, went in slow course to the "American Expeditionary Forces in France," and finally found him whom it patiently sought. He delayed not long to answer, and in time she held in a shaking hand the penciled missive he had sent her: "You forget all that comic talk about me enlisting because of your telling me to. I'd written my father I was going at the first chance a month and a half before that day when you said it. My mind was made up the first time there was any talk of war, and you had about as much responsibility for my going as some little sparrow or something. Of course I don't mean I didn't pay any attention to the different things you said, because I always did, and I used to worry over it because I was afraid some day it would get you into trouble, and I'm mighty glad you've cut it out. That's right: you're a regular girl now. You always were one, and I knew that all right. I'm not as scared to write to you as I was to talk to you, so I guess you know I was mighty tickled to get your letter. It sounded blue, but I was glad to get it. You let I'll write to you! I don't suppose you could have any idea how glad I was to get your letter. I could sit here and write to you all day if they'd let me, but I'm a corporal now. When you answer this, I wish you'd say how the old town looks and if the grass in the front yards is as green as it usually is, and everything. And tell me some more about everything you think of when you are working down at the Red Cross like you said. I guess I've read your letter five million times, and that part ten million. I mean where you underlined that 'you' and what you said to yourself at the Red Cross. Oh, murder, but I was glad to read that! Don't forget about writing anything else you think of like that."

"Well, I was interrupted then and this is the next day. Of course I can't tell you where we are, because that darned censor will read this letter, but

They Were Soldiers.

I guess he will let this much by. Who do you think I ran across in a village yesterday? Two boys from the old school days, and we certainly did shake hands a few times! It was that old foolish Dutch Krusemeyer and Albert Paxton, both of them lieutenants. I heard Fred Mitchell is still training in the States and about crazy because they won't send him over yet.

"If you have any idea how glad I was to get your letter, you wouldn't lose any time answering this one. Anyhow, I'm going to write to you again every few days if I get the chance, because maybe you'll answer more than one of 'em."

"But see here, cut out that 'sent you to be killed' stuff. You've got the wrong idea altogether. We've got the big job of our lives, we know that, but we're going to do it. There'll be mistakes and bad times, but we won't fall down. Now, you'll excuse me for saying this in this way, Dora, but I don't know just how to express myself except saying of course we know everybody isn't going to get back home—but listen, we didn't come over here to get killed particularly, we came over to give these Dutchmen h—l!

"Perhaps you can excuse language if I write it with a blank like that, but before we get back we're going to do what we came for. They may not all of them be as bad as some of them—it's a good thing you don't know what we do, because some of it would make you sick. As I say, there may be quite a lot of good ones among them; but we know what they've done to this country, and we know what they mean to do to them. Of course that's why I'm here. It wasn't you."

"Don't forget to write pretty soon, Dora. You say in your letter—I certainly was glad to get that letter—well, you say I have things to do more important than 'girls.' Dora, I think you probably know without my saying so that of course while I have got important things to do, just as every man over here has, and everybody at home, for that matter, well, the thing that is most important in the world to me, next to helping win this war, it's reading the next letter from you."

"Don't forget how glad I'll be to get it, and don't forget you didn't have anything to do with my being over here. That was—it was something else. And you bet, whatever happens I'm glad I came! Don't ever forget that!"

Dora knew it was "something else." Her memory went back to her first recollection of him in school: from that time on he had been just an ordinary, everyday boy, floundering somehow through his lessons in school and through his sweethearts with Millie, as the millions of other boys floundered along with their own lessons and their own Millies. She saw him swinging his books and romping homeward from the schoolhouse, or going whistling by her father's front yard, rattling a stick on the fence as he went, care-free and masterful, but shy as a deer if strangers looked at him, and always "not much of a talker."

She had always felt so superior to him; she shuddered as she thought of it. His quiet had been so much better than her talk. His intelligence was proven now, when it came to the greatest test, to be of a stronger sort than hers. He was wise and good and gentle—and a fighting man! "We know what they've done to this country and what they mean to do to ours. So we're going to attend to them." She read this over, and she knew that Ramsey, wise and gentle and good, would fight like an unchained devil, and that he and his comrades would indeed and indeed do what they "came for."

"It wasn't you," he said. She nodded gently, agreeing, and knew what it was that sent him. Yet Ramsey had his own secret here, and did not tell it. Sometimes there rose, faint in his memory, a whimsical picture, yet one that had always meant much to him. He would see an old man sitting with a little boy upon a rustic bench under a walnut tree to watch the "Decoration Day Parade" go by—and Ramsey would see a shoot of sunshine that had somehow got through the walnut tree and make a bedazzlement of glinting fine lines over a spot about the size of a saucer, upon the old man's thick white hair. And in Ramsey's memory, the little boy, sitting beside the veteran, would half close his eyes, drowsily, playing that this sunshine spot was a white bird's nest, until he had a momentary dream of a glittering little bird that dwelt there and wore a blue soldier cap on its head. And Ramsey would bring out of his memory thoughts that the old man had got into the child's head that day. "We knew that armies fighting for the Freedom of Man had to win, in the long run.... We were on the side of God's Plan.... Long ago we began to see hints of His Plan.... Man has to win his freedom from himself—men in the light have to fight against men in the dark.... That light is the answer.... We had the light that made us never doubt."

A long while Dora sat with the letter in her hand before she answered it and took it upon her heart to wear. That was the place for it, since it was already within her heart, where he would find it when he came home again. And she beheld the revelation sent to her. This ordinary life of Ramsey's was but the outward glinting of a high and splendid spirit, as high and splendid as earth can show. And yet it was only the life of an everyday American boy. The streets of the town were full, now, of boys like Ramsey.

At first they were just boys in uniform; then one saw that they were boys no more.

They were soldiers.

THOUGHT IS NOT REALLY RAPID

Mind Moves Comparatively Slowly, Notwithstanding Expression That Has Become Common.

"As quick as thought" is an expression much used to denote the acme of speed in action, but, like so many popular expressions, this one is misleading. Thought, or at least the mental registering of a sensation, is not an exceedingly speedy process, the thought impulse moving at the comparatively slow speed of 110 feet a second, or 75 miles an hour. Light travels nearly nine million times as swiftly. Thought would be hopelessly beaten in a race with a motorcar.

Time and Tide is the name of a London newspaper which is owned and controlled entirely by women.

Indigestion and Dyspepsia Overcome

Victims of stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia and their allied complaints find Tanlac an ever-ready source of relief and comfort. Thousands of people have found the joys of health by its use after everything else they tried had failed.

"Tanlac helped me wonderfully," said Mrs. W. H. Hocker, 84 Rose Ave., Clifton Forge, Va. "For over a year I suffered, tortures from indigestion, and had to live on the simplest foods. I became almost a nervous wreck. Tanlac restored me to the best of health."

Tanlac helps the stomach digest the food properly and eliminate waste. Soon the whole system is built up, the blood is purified and the entire body takes on new tone, vitality and energy. Get a bottle today and start on the road to health. For sale by all good druggists.—Advertisement.

Long-Distance Courting.

The widowed "scrub lady" was a little abstracted. Her mistress suspected a second romance and made such kindly inquiries that the truth emerged.

"Yes, mom, I suppose I am courting. An' yet, I don't know for sure, because he's been fishin' down in Florida for the last six months."

Little Mamie had been a careful observer of her parents' conversation. Accompanied by her mother she was walking one day last spring when two girls wearing galoshes, passed them. Stopping suddenly, Mamie said, "Look, mother, are they some of the 'bootleggers' daddy was talking about?"

ROOM FOR BUT ONE THOUGHT

Quite Impossible for Glutton's Ideas to Rise Above Consideration of His Stomach.

"Henry Watterson," said a Louisville editor, "was a gourmand—a fin gourmet, as the French put it—but he hated gluttony like sin."

"Gluttons, he claimed, couldn't keep their minds off their stomachs. He said he once visited an English lord, and the smoking room of the castle was crowded with trophies of the lord's skill in the hunting field.

"A fat glutton was among the party. He, with the rest, admired the fine display of antlers—horns of the mountain sheep, the elk, the antelope, the wild goat, moose and so on. Then there were skins—bear skins, bison skins, tiger skins. And stuffed birds—pheasants, woodcock, wild turkey, wild duck.

"My lord," said the glutton, "tell me—did you eat all this yourself?"

Positions Altered.

Hattie—Oh, Evelyn, did he propose last night? Tell me what it was like?

Evelyn—Oh, it was very simple. When he began he was on his knees, and when he finished I was on them.

Foresee trouble and then you can be calm about it.

Why Free?

"Why do they call this a free country?" asked the foreign communist.

"Because," answered the respectable citizen, "you are always at liberty to leave it if you don't like it."

Question.

"The poets' corner."

"Huh? Has somebody gotten up a corner in poets?"

Not Now.

"When I was young, girls were taught to darn their own stockings."

"Yes, Grandma, but in those days it was possible to place a garn where it wouldn't show!"—Life.

Term Has Changed Meaning.

In the time of Queen Elizabeth (1558-1603) and in the time of George I. (1714-1727) 60 shillings were coined to the pound. This ratio still continues, but the term "pound" has lost its original meaning and simply signifies 20 shillings of the present coinage.

Necessity for Friction.

If a body once set in motion met with no opposition it would go in a straight line forever. Were it not for friction, nails would not hold and walking would be impossible. One realizes the truth of this when attempting to walk on smooth ice or a highly polished floor.

Excesses Mainly Cause of Illness.

A new commandment for which the time is now ripe is "Thou shalt not fall ill." Seventy-five per cent of the illness in the country is the result of violations of the elementary laws of health, excess of eating, drinking, and smoking.

The Seven "Modern Wonders."

The present age is one of supremacy in science rather than art. The seven are: 1. Wireless telegraph; 2. telephone; 3. flying machine; 4. radium; 5. antiseptics and antitoxins; 6. the X-ray; and 7. spectrum analysis.
